CONFERENCE:

THE IMPORTANCE OF FREE DEVELOPMENT TO PREPARE FOR THE FUTURE

Free development and play are words that we often use, but why are they so important for education of the future? Peter Gray discusses play and the importance of play in self-directed development of young people. He will explain why play is so important from an evolutionary point of view. And why play and free development are crucial to prepare children for an ever-changing future.

Peter Gray

Peter Gray, one of the world's experts in the field of play and free development, will give a one-off presentation in Luxembourg.

Peter Gray is an evolutionary developmental psychologist and emeritus professor at Boston College. He is the author of "Psychology", an introductory book used by millions of psychology students, and of "Free To Learn: Why releasing the instinct to play will make our children happier, more self-reliant, and better students for life".
